Residential use in agricultural homesteads (BRU)

Primary use:

Land primarily designated for residential use in traditional forms of family and agricultural homesteads, family farms with both residential and agricultural functions, such as small-scale animal husbandry and local crop cultivation.

Permitted use:

Permitted uses include civic amenities (especially accommodation, dining, sports, and recreational facilities) of local significance that do not disturb the residential function beyond acceptable levels.

Use is allowed in the form of agrotourism farms with accommodation, dining services, sports and recreational facilities, and economic infrastructure, with an appropriate number of parking and storage spaces.

Also permitted are small-scale production services (e.g., craft workshops, processing of wood or agricultural/horticultural products) that do not disturb the surrounding residential character. Technical and transport infrastructure necessary for servicing the area, including garages and parking spaces for agricultural or other equipment serving the primary and permitted uses, is also allowed.

Ideal for a future farm, recreational complex, or economic facilities with access to water.
